NY Attorney General Singles Out B&H Foto In 'Instant Rebate' Sales Tax Dispute

New York Attorney General Letitia James last week sued the chassidic-owned B&H Foto & Electronics Corporation, the nation's largest non-chain photo and video equipment retailer, for failure to pay sales tax on reimbursements from manufacturers for instant rebate discounted sales.

The complaint filed in NYS Supreme Court alleges that B&H "fraudulently" failed to collect or pay sales tax on the amount of the discount as required by law. (It does not claim that B&H withheld sales taxes it collected from customers for the final discounted price.)

In a statement, the Attorney General charged that the company was motivated by a desire to gain a "competitive edge" over its competitors and maximize its profits at the expense of all New Yorkers.

A B&H spokesman told The Jewish Press that B&H did not remit the sales tax on the discounted amount because it never collected it from the consumer as per industry-wide practice. It acted in accordance with New York law, the spokesman said.

He also noted that B&H has been in business for 47 years and has been regularly audited by NYS tax authorities and no issue over the practice was ever raised.
